SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.

1. [REDACTED] minesweeper, passed by about 100 meters away at a speed of 10 or 11 knots and promptly returned flag dipping.
2. At 2 p.m. on 4 November 1953, a destroyer with tripod mast and two smokestacks was moored behind the mole of the new warship basin in the [REDACTED] of Gdynia harbor. [REDACTED] she was the [REDACTED] informant later thought that she looked like the BURZA, but [REDACTED] the destroyer had had two stacks with raked smoke hoods [REDACTED] the after stack was thicker than the forward stack.
3. Entry clearance was performed by two officers and twelve men as previously. [REDACTED] ship was, however, more heavily guarded during the loading operations than in the summer of 1953. Hanging over the side of ladders, scaffolds or rope's ends was forbidden. Each shore crane was guarded by a sentry. [REDACTED] ship, which was berthed alongside the Swedish Quay, loaded 1,450 tons of large coal for Goeteborg in twelve working hours and left port at 1415 on 5 November 1953.
